

ABSTRACT

A method monitors a network. The method receives at least one data packet, and reads an entry of a memory device. The entry of the memory device containing a first statistical value and a second statistical value. The method determines a third statistical value based on at least one of the data packet, the first statistical value, and the second statistical value. The method then stores the determined third statistical value in the entry of the memory device.